Learn how to protect your children while on line (privacy, identity theft, online predators, inappropriate content, online bullying, etc)

Protect your children on MySpace and Facebook. While there are nice things about these sites, and while they look innocent on the outside, and most kids use it to stay connected with friends, the land of the Internet isn't innocent by any means. Things can happen if a child isn't careful.

Many kids on Facebook and MySpace post pictures, full name, addresses, school they attend and even cell phone numbers. All this information is easily accessible at the click of a button to anyone.

Most parents are still in the dark about these sites and often don't know what their children are up to when they see them sitting at their computers clicking away. This is a must attend workshop for parents and everybody responsible for children.

Online identity theft and Cybercrimes have become a worldwide problem that could affect anybody in this day and age. Recent surveys indicate that up to 78% of internet users don't know how to protect their personal information or have not taken any measure to prevent becoming victims of Cybercrime, especially when it comes to children.
